AMARI

"Vi posso offrire un amaro?" Or, "Can I offer you an amaro?" is the single most reassuring phrase to be heard at the conclusion of a restaurant meal in Italy. Amaro (Italian for "bitter") is an Italian herbal liqueur often originated in monasteries and pharmacies. Amaro is produced by macerating herbs, roots, flowers, bark, and/or citrus peels in alcohol, either neutral spirits or wine, mixing the filtrate with sugar syrup, and allowing the mixture to age in casks or bottles.

GRAPPE

Distilled from pomace – the leftover grape skins, seeds, stalks and pulp from the wine press – was invented by Italian farmers to extract the last drop of value from their grapes and potent enough to get the farmers through the cold winter months. It was good at warming you up. For generations, Italians have sipped this "firewater" after meals and even added a little to their morning espresso, (café corretto) to "correct" it. Grappa was originally made in Bassano del Grappa – were it gets its name - a small town of Italy's northern Veneto region.

ABSINTHE

Historically described as a distilled, highly alcoholic beverage. It is an anise-flavored spirit derived from botanicals, including the flowers and leaves of Artemisia absinthium ("grand wormwood"), together with green anise, sweet fennel, and other medicinal and culinary herbs. Absinthe traditionally has a natural green color but may also be colorless. Normally diluted with water prior to being consumed.

BOURBON

American Bourbon is distilled once, then aged in fresh charred oak barrels. Bourbons impart a raw, sweet corn flavor due to the fact that bourbon is made with at least 51% corn. Small batch bourbons are made in limited quantities, aged six to nine years, and are characteristic of pre-Prohibition whiskey, with strong, rich flavors, heat, and aromas.

RYE WHISKEY

Rye whiskey was the prevalent whiskey of the northeastern states, especially Pennsylvania and Maryland, but largely disappeared after Prohibition. Now in an era where strong flavors are back in style, rye is enjoying a new golden age. It has to have a mash content of at least 51% rye and, if aged for at least two years in new charred oak barrels, it earns the moniker 'straight rye'.

SCOTCH WHISKY

Die-hard aficionados swear that nothing is finer than a single malt with its characteristic regional flavors. Derived from malted barley Scotch is double-distilled and the malted barley is dried using peat smoke, imparting earthy, smoky, salty and oily characteristics, depending upon the region in which it is produced. Scotch is aged first in used bourbon barrels for at least three years.

Older, rarer Scotches receive additional aging in madeira, port, or other casks.

Scotland is split into five distinctive whisky-producing regions. The same basic process is used to produce whisky across the country but subtle variations mean single malts from each region have unique characteristics and flavors.

HIGHLAND

By far the biggest region geographically, the Highland malts inevitably embrace wide and robust flavor variations. Generally heavier and drier in character compared to other regions, whiskies from here often have nutty, honey, heather or peaty notes. Distilleries near the sea also have some salty, maritime influences in their malts.

CAMPBELTOWN

Campbeltown, the small coastal town at the tip of the Kintyre peninsula, once boasted over 30 local distilleries but now has just three. Nevertheless, they are still considered by serious malt lovers to represent a distinct region in their own right. Single malts produced here are noticeable for their briny character and some boast peaty notes.

SPRINGBANK 15 YR	35

ISLAY

Pronounced "eye-luh", this is the greatest of whisky-producing islands. It is only 25 miles long, but has no fewer than eight distilleries. It's covered in peat which is exposed to rain and sea spray. Harvested and used to malt the barley used in distilling, the peat gives the single malts here their characteristic smoky flavor with some salty, seaweed notes.

LOWLAND

There are only a handful of Lowland distilleries still operating, producing softer, lighter style single malts that are traditionally known as the 'Lowland Ladies'. Whiskies from here are known for their malty, zesty flavors with slightly fruity, citrusy and sometimes floral notes.

AUCHENTOSHAN THREEWOOD	20

SPEYSIDE

The biggest region in terms of production, half of all Scottish distilleries can be found here. Speyside single malts are noted in general for their elegance and complexity, sometimes with a refined smokiness but more often a fruitiness ranging from ripe pears to sultanas.

BLENDED

Roughly nine out of 10 bottles of Scotch sold around the world are blends – that is, a mix of grain and single malt whiskies. These products are the lifeblood of the industry and the liquid expression of an art form that borders on alchemy: combining myriad components to create one harmonious and consistent whole.

IRISH WHISKEY

The Irish may have been the first distillers in the British Isles and, for a brief period in the 19th century, Irish whiskey reigned supreme over its Scottish rival. Boom was followed by bust – and near extinction – but today the good times are back, with distilleries popping up all over the Emerald Isle.

JAPANESE WHISKY

It's no secret that Japanese whisky has taken the world by storm in the past five years, but it's far from new. When Masataka Taketsuru returned to Japan from Scotland in the early 1920s, having studied distilling, he, in essence, became responsible for the birth of Japanese whisky, including the Yamazaki and Nikka brands directly.

ARMAGNAC

Armagnac is a grape brandy produced in the Gascony region of south-west France, as it has been since at least the 15th century. A fuller-bodied (some would say rustic) style of brandy when compared to Cognac, it is often aged for many years (decades in some cases) and makes an excellent digestif.

CALVADOS

Calvados, made almost exclusively in Normandy, is a cider spirit. Cider is made with specific apples or pears (some of them being very old varieties), and there are four types of apples used in cider making: sweet, bittersweet, bitter and sour. The quality of the cider depends upon the type of soil, the type of orchard and the pressing of the fruit.

COGNAC

For the past three centuries, Cognac has been almost universally recognized as the finest of all the spirits that are distilled from grapes. It has many incomparable qualities: fruitiness, subtlety of bouquet, intensity, warmth and, above all, the complexity of the many thousands of styles and flavors from a (predominantly) single grape variety.

Taken at its most basic, it's just a spirit that's flavored with juniper. But behind that simple facade lies one of the world's most complex and best-loved spirits, with a history that spans hundreds of years and reaches back to the dawn of distillation.

TEQUILA

The first use of tequila dates back 2,000 years ago to the Aztec people of central Mexico who used the fermented beverage during ceremonies & rituals. Considered now to have started in “Ancient Times” the potent spirit we now call tequila didn’t officially get it’s start until the 15th & 16th century when the first Spanish Conquistadors arrived in Mexico. Not long after arriving in Mexico the conquers quickly ran out of their beloved brandy & began distilling the fermented juices of the agave into tequila.

The flavor profile of tequila is impacted by the region where the agave is grown – in the highlands or the lowlands. Due to differences in elevation and weather, the agave plants grown in each area create different tasting tequilas. Highland agave plants are bigger and richer with a longer growing cycle, making the tequila sweeter and fruitier with floral hints. Lowland agave have a shorter growing cycle and give tequila an earthy and herbaceous flavor and are often spicier.

Vodka is much more interesting than it might appear to the casual observer. Scrape beneath the surface and you'll find a spirit with a rich and diverse history, made from a variety of raw materials, each of which affect the finished product's final taste, and sometimes flavored with a quite bewildering array of different fruits, herbs and spices from every corner of the globe.
